I enjoy writing about Adelaide and its many attractions. If you think Adelaide is boring, the problem is not with Adelaide. adelaideuneartthed.blogspot.com.au/

The East End has long had a tradition for being the place for fresh produce, great shopping and trendy eateries. There have been markets in Adelaide here since before the days of the Adelaide Fruit and Produce Exchange, and the Ebenezer Night Markets are set to continue that tradition.

Previously called Summer Fridays in the East End, the Ebenezer Night Markets take place on selected Fridays as the working week winds down. While the last of the city workers finish their late lunches in trendy Ebenezer Place, market stalls are busily setting up for another night of fun things to do in Adelaide's East End.

The free night markets open at 5.30pm in Ebenezer Place when the whole area becomes a massive street party. With around 50 stalls you will find everything you want at the Ebenezer Night Markets, including lots of gift ideas for that hard to please person.

Market stalls offering handmade crafts, artisan jewellery, henna body art, scented soy candles, and rainforest terrariums compete with others exhibiting beautiful contemporary art and photographic creations.

A range of clothing for babies, retro and vintage fashions, women's and designer clothing, even 1950's rockabilly inspired children's clothing and accessories, are all to be found in the eclectic collection of stalls. If you're looking for a new outfit this is the place to be.

Of course there are plenty of food stalls too, so if you have been in the Belgian Beer Cafe for a while you can be tempted with a tasty range of some of the best foods in Adelaide.

Experience the unique flavours of Ukus - Balkan street food, eat healthy with vegan and vegetarian food from Veggie Velo, be transported to heavenly rapture with Kokochi Japanese Soul Food, or enjoy Hot Mumma's Curries - there's something for every taste.

Of course you can still dine in at East End Providers, Burger Theory or one of the many other food vendors in Adelaide's trendy corner. To satisfy your sweet tooth head for La Creperie - A Touch of France, Evi's Grecian Delights, Happy Fairy Floss, and Suzie's Homemade Goodies.

If you have just escaped the office probably one of the first things that you will be looking for is a nice relaxing drink as you listen to the free live music. Applewood Distillery and Unico Zelo Wines will help soothe your spirits, or if you're looking for a beer then the Belgian Beer Cafe is a logical stop. They recently installed festive festoon lighting in Belgian Beer Café outdoor dining area so it's got a real party atmosphere now.

The Ebenezer Night Markets have a friendly relaxed vibe about them: why not meet up with a few friends after work and enjoy a few drinks there? DJ Ian will be playing some relaxing lounge music, so you'll not have your conversation drowned out.
