

Meet Dan in chill section

FRINGE: It's sheer coincidence that Melbourne "laughter chef" Danny McGinlay will be performing his comedy show above a gelati shop.

His combination cooking and comedy performance Food Dude: Recipes for Disaster is on at Rundle St's Gelatissimo lounge as part of the Fringe Festival.

"It was a bit of an accident in that my very good friend Mike Kilmczak showed me the venue and I loved it," McGinlay says.

McGinlay's previous creations include a party pie parmigiana and Aussie sushi with beetroot and Twisties.

➔ Food Dude: Recipes for Disaster is on at 9.30 each night until Sunday, March 13 (except Wednesday, March 9).

The Fringe Festival continues until March 13.

Australian organic label set for Rundle St East opening

FASHION: Australian designer label Gorman will open a boutique on Rundle St East at the end of March. The label, started by designer Lisa Gorman in 1999, features a range made from organic fibres and yarns. Gorman is the latest top-end brand to set up shop on the retail strip, alongside fashion giants Marcs, Saba, Morrison and Sass & Bide.

Children in care benefit from cash to build play area

GRANT: A city child care centre has received a $1200 grant to build a new play area. Sturt St Community Child Care Centre is one of 625 not-for-profit local groups to receive money from the Telstra Kids Fund. The fund will donate $750,000 to schools, art groups, sports clubs, disability services and environmental organisations this year.

Jump in complaints linked to change in people's attitudes

HEALTH: A community more likely to speak up when something goes wrong may be a reason behind a 30 per cent jump in the number of complaints received by the state's health watchdog. The Health and Community Services Complaints Commission 2009-10 annual report, released this month, shows 1090 complaints against health care providers, up from 832 the previous year. HCSCC Commissioner Leena Sudano said the exact reason behind the increase was unknown but could be because of changes in the community's attitude toward voicing complaints.

History buffs able to log on and view 175 years of SA

CELEBRATE: A website with reports, photos and book excerpts celebrating SA's 175th anniversary will go online tomorrow. Co-ordinated by the Professional Historians Association of SA, the site will feature work published by group members with topics ranging from settlement to religion. There will be historic photos and illustrations, a time line of events from 1836 and articles about objects significant to the state's history. Visit www.sahistorians.org.au

Road safety resource kit puts elderly in driver's seat

OLDER MOTORISTS: A road safety resource kit for older people to help them know their rights and obligations to be able to drive has been launched. Moving Right Along: Obligations and Opportunities For Older Drivers contains road safety information including medical requirements, assessment options, and advice on travel options, buying safer cars and motorised scooters. The kit is a joint project by the Transport Department, SA Police, The Centre for Automotive Safety Research, The Council on the Ageing and occupational therapists. It will be available from public libraries, or visit www.dte1.sa.gov.au/roadsafety

NEWSPACK

Some of the city's big businesses will attend the state's largest corporate barbecue to help raise money for disability services group Bedford tomorrow (Friday, March 4). More than 600 corporate high-flyers including workers from Ernst & Young and KPMG are expected at the event at the Adelaide Oval pavilion. Local retailers have also donated prizes to be auctioned.
